SAINT-JEAN
CAP-FERRAT

Editorial

Welcome to Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat.

This guide is designed to be with you throughout your stay.

Near some of the biggest towns in the French Riviera and Italy, the Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat peninsula is located just ten minutes from Nice and Monaco, and thirty minutes drive from Nice Côte d'Azur international airport.

Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat has become internationally renowned, offering visitors all the charm of an exceptional and unspoilt site.

A green oasis in the heart of the Côte-d'Azur with more than 300 days of sunshine a year, the Saint-Jean territory is the ideal holiday destination: beaches, restaurants, shops, a port, hiking trails along the shore, hotels, magnificent gardens and sumptuous villas are located in a splendid natural setting...

The Saint-Hospice chapel and colossal bronze statue of the Virgin Mary, the Ephrussi de Rothschild Villa-museum, the Villa Santo Sospir and other period villas reflect a past steeped in history and culture that endures to this day with a permanent exhibition in the village of the artist Sacha Sosno.

We hope you enjoy your stay in Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat!

SAINT-JEAN CAP- FERRAT

Its History

Nestled amid an arid and rocky land, the hamlet of Saint-Jean was once home to fishermen and farmer families clustered around the church and harbour area. In the late 19th century, the Compagnie Générale des Eaux (water company), created an artificial lake on the Cap-Ferrat which developed a dense and varied vegetation on the peninsula. Wealthy families from Nice started coming to the peninsula for their family outings and from the end of the 19th century, crowned heads and aristocracy would also come for their holidays. The history of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat was made!

Great Estates

1. LO SCOGLIETTO

Now «La Fleur du Cap», this villa once belonged to the actor David Niven and Charlie Chaplin also stayed here.

2. DOMAINE DES CÈDRES

Property of the King of Belgium Leopold II, it is one of the most beautiful estates on the peninsula. In 1924, the Marnier-Lapostolle family, creator of the «Grand Marnier» liqueur, became the owner until 2016.

3. LA RADIANA

This villa was built for the Baroness of Vaughan, mistress of King Leopold II.

4. DOMAINE MARYLAND

Built at the request of Royal Navy Admiral Sir Arthur Wilson, who held lavish celebrations here.

5. LA VIGIE

This villa was built by an industrialist from Lyon, Emile Crozet-Fourneyron, on the site of former grain mills.

6. CHÂTEAU SAINT-JEAN

This villa belonged to a Hungarian princess who adored animals. She used to stroll around the village with her lion cub!

7. BAÏA DEI FIORI

Built by the American painter Ralph Curtis, it became the property of His Excellency Ilhamy Hussein Pasha in the 1950s.

8. MES ROCHERS

This castle-like house (of which only the original wall and wooden door remain) belonged to Paris Singer, son of the creator of the Singer sewing machine.

9. LA MAURESQUE

Owned by writer Somerset Maugham, he lived there until his death in 1965. He hosted many personalities such as Winston Churchill, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor...

10. LA LIGNE DROITE

Classified as a Historic Monument, this villa was built by Jean Bouchet, a student of the famous architect Le Corbusier. It is a representative example of the modern movement of the time.

Famous artists and painters also stayed in Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat

LA VILLA NATACHA

Owned by the art publisher Tériade who hosted many artists such as Chagall, Picasso and Matisse. The latter created a stained glass window and a ceramic wall in the dining room.

THE HOTEL & SPA LA VILLA CAP FERRAT (FORMER HOTEL BELLE AURORE)

German-born Jewish artist Charlotte Salomon stayed at this hotel for two years where she painted her life's work «Life? or Theatre?». The writer David Foenkinos dedicated his book «Charlotte» (Renaudot Prize and Goncourt Prize for High School Students 2014) to this talented artist who died at the age of 26 in 1943 in Auschwitz. Her work is exhibited in the Jewish Museum of Amsterdam.

SAINT-JEAN CAP-FERRAT

Must-see sights

Museums & heritage

Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild

Inspired by the Italian Renaissance style, this palace features a range of styles from various eras, with strong Lombard, Venetian and Spanish influences.

The estate was built between 1905 and 1912. Baroness Béatrice de Rothschild fell in love with this magical setting, and her crazy dream led her to transform these 10 hectares of unspoiled land into a haven that would house her collection of artworks (18th century furniture, china from the Sèvres and Vincennes Royal Manufacturers, and many more).

The Baroness bequeathed the entire villa and all its treasures to the Académie des Beaux-Arts de l'Institut de France, which took ownership after her death in 1934.

The villa is surrounded by nine themed gardens and overlooks the bays of Villefranche-sur-Mer and Beaulieu-sur-Mer. Magical musical water displays take place in the French-style garden every 20 minutes, adding an enchanting feeling to the place.

Villa Santo Sospir*

The multi-talented Jean Cocteau was a loyal visitor to the French Riviera, leaving his mark on many towns.

In 1950, when the poet had just finished filming "Les Enfants Terribles", his friend Francine Weisweiler invited him to spend a few days at her villa in Cap-Ferrat.

Seduced by its beauty and magic, Jean Cocteau stayed at the villa for several months and soon became a regular visitor. During his first stay, he began to 'tattoo' the villa's bare white walls.

He once said, "A young woman lives in Santo Sospir. It wasn't a question of decorating the walls, but rather drawing on its skin: I created linear frescoes with minimal colour to bring out the tattoos. Santo Sospir is a tattooed villa."

La chapelle

Saint-Hospice (The chapel)

Entirely renovated in 2022, the Saint-Hospice chapel was built in 11th century on the ruins of a sanctuary.

It owes its name to the Benedictine monk Hospitius who lived in one of its towers around 557 AD. In a state of total deprivation, he inflicted heavy punishment on himself to ensure he fully deserved his place in heaven.

Legend has it that when the Lombards invaded the coast (as the monk had already predicted), one of them tried to kill the hermit but his arm was suddenly paralysed. In awe of his calmness, the Barbarians spared him his life. Many miraculous acts of healing have been attributed to him, including curing a deaf person, a blind person and a woman possessed by demons.

The chapel was fully restored in the 17th century by Charles Emmanuel II, Duke of Savoy, who extended it and added an altar in the 18th Century. The porch dates from 1826. The chapel was previously an important pilgrimage site and housed up to 140 ex-votos.

Restored in 2022, the bronze Virgin (11m40 high) beside the chapel was built in 1903 at the request of a wealthy merchant from Nice after he was granted a wish. It was sculpted by Tranquillo Galbusieri.

L'église Saint Jean-Baptiste (The church)

The Saint Jean-Baptiste church dates from around the 11th century. It is a very simple church but it features beautiful decorations. Two extensions were built in the 19th century, and the presbytery was built in 1846. The major restoration works between 1992 and 1998 gradually gave the monument its finished appearance that you can admire today. Every year, on the 24th of June, the whole village celebrates its Patron Saint's day by organising a procession that involves carrying the statue of Saint Jean-Baptiste down to the jetty at the old harbour.

The graveyard by the sea

Nestled at the top of the Saint-Hospice headland, the municipal cemetery of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat feels like the edge-of-the-world. It was created in 1905 thanks to the generosity of Auguste Gal, a rich merchant from Nice, who provided the land. Located at the foot of the Saint-Hospice chapel and the bronze statue of the Virgin, the graveyard by the sea overlooks the Mediterranean Sea and offers exceptional views. A place for peacefulness and contemplation.

Belgian military cemetery

Located at the foot of the chapel, it owes its name to the Belgian victims of the First World War who lost their lives at the Villa Les Cèdres. This property, previously owned by King Leopold II of Belgium, was transformed into a military hospital by his nephew Albert I during the war.

The semaphore

The semaphore was built in 1862 by decision of Napoleon III. It belongs to the French Navy and its current missions include, among others, the regulation of maritime traffic and the monitoring of fires on the coast. It culminates at 143m of altitude.

The Cap-Ferrat lighthouse

Built in 1732, the lighthouse was designed to replace an ancient 16th century fire tower. Destroyed in 1944, it was rebuilt in its current form after the war. It offers unique views that extend from l'Estérel as far as the Italian coast. The lighthouse is currently closed to the public.

The lighthouse is listed as a Monument Historique (National Heritage site) since 2012.

COEXIST fountains

These two fountains, one at the foot of the lighthouse and the other at the beginning of the Saint-Hospice trail, were inaugurated in September 2007 in the presence of James Kidner, the Director of the COEXIST Foundation, Cherie Blair, wife of the former Prime Minister Tony Blair, and the singer Bono from the band U2. The COEXIST foundation works to build relationships between different religions. Its logo consists of the Muslim Crescent, the Jewish Star of David and the Christian Cross.

The port

It is around the port, with its fishing activities, a vital source to the village, that Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat rose and developed.

The old port, where the current Lindbergh quay is located, was built by the prisoners of the Villefranche-sur-Mer prison between 1840 and 1876. There are shops and a restaurant, the Charlie Chaplin events hall and cinema, the Seashell Museum and the SOS Grand Bleu Association.

In 1972, the new port was created. It was renovated between 2016 and 2018. It can now accommodate 560 permanent and passing boats. The shopping quay, called Quai Virgile Allari, is ideal for strolling, dining, and relaxing.

There are restaurants, shops and art galleries, as well as the Espace Neptune, where exhibitions, concerts and other events are regularly organised.

In the spring of 2023, the Tourist office opened its new premises on the port.
